Title: The Chicago Ratcatchers Society

A logo (a quick sketch is fine)

Intro & conclusion :

Hello, my name is (TBD). I've been working in pest control, specifically rat catching, for the last 20 years. Throughout my career, there have been… several interesting cases of infestation over the years. Rats with too many tails, rats with several heads, mutations that shouldn't happen as frequently as they should. In the past few years, I have noticed a downturn in the calls I've received. That's normal to an extent, the pest control business is always booming in Chicago, especially with rats, and people do move come and go. But even my regulars, the people who have stayed in their apartment since I've started fighting off the pests have stopped contacting me. Recently, my repeat customer (TBD) has stopped reaching out. He was one of my main source of income, on account of his landlord habits, so I decided to search his name, see if he had also left town. To my surprise, he's been listed as a missing person for the last month. The issue with that is, I last spoke to him two weeks ago. The email below is what he sent.

(something something uhh new apartments connect to subway, and the area may have more rats than most so will be in more frequent contact, ect ect)

At my old age, I shouldn't be sticking my neck around to look for these kinds of odd happenings, but business is business, and I need to know where my customers are going. So far what I've found isn't looking good. There is something big under the city, and I am far too old to try to be able to unravel it alone. That is why I have made this site. Hopefully, someone sees this, and knows more of whats happening. Or perhaps rodent control people are dealing with the same, and the small amount of findings will be of benefit.

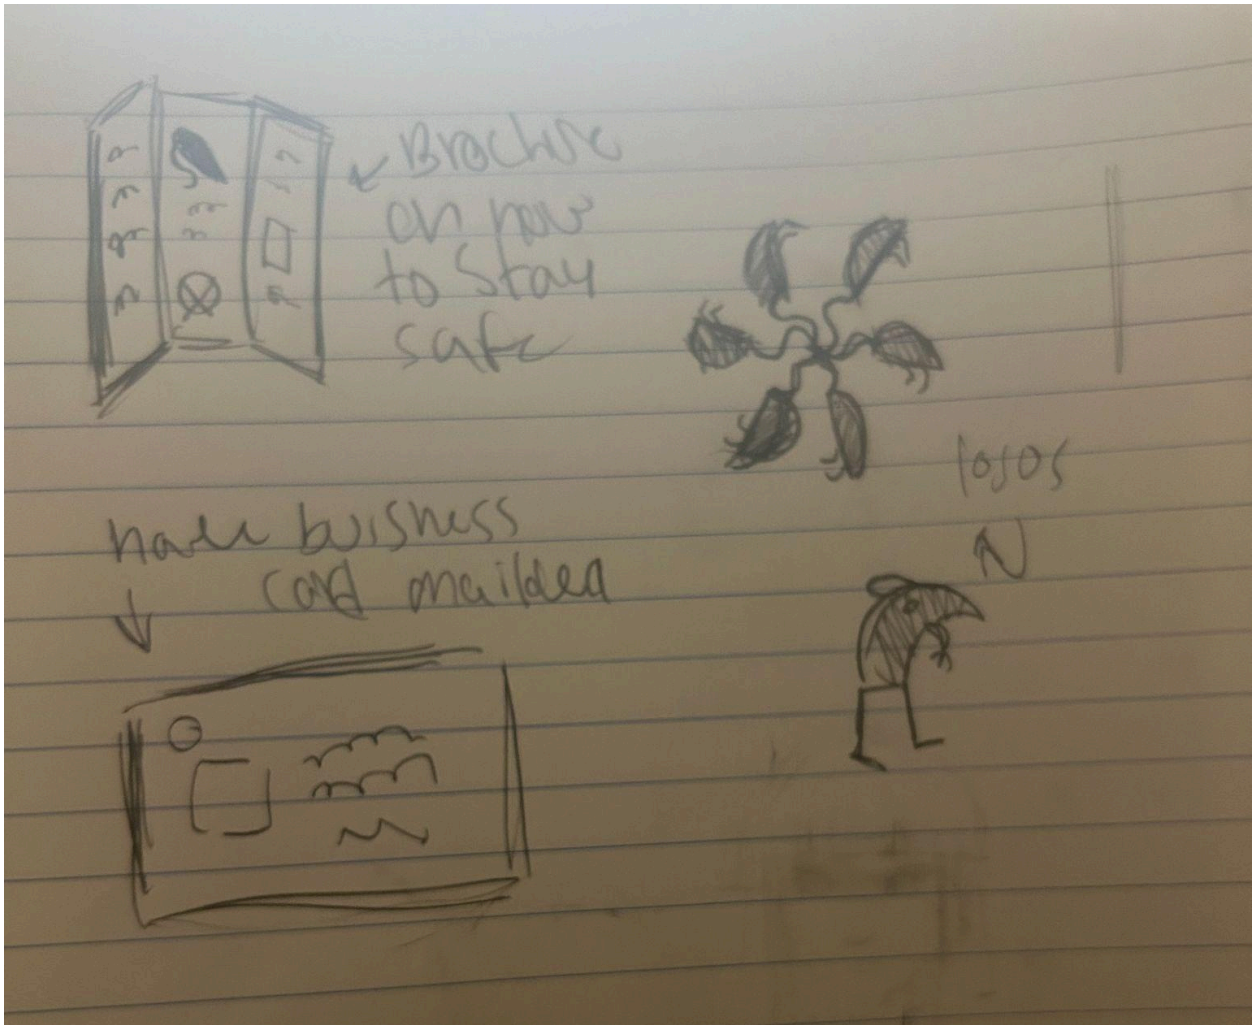
About: The Chicago Ratcatchers Society was started to share information on the odd happenings with the rats in the city. It was started earlier this year, when the disappearances started.

Memorial idea: I was thinking of maybe doing like a missing people page, where the people who have dissapeared have a small bio, when they dissapeared, and who they are.

Research:

1. https://www.chicago.gov/city/en/depts/streets/provdrs/rodent/svcs/rats_in_chicago.html "Winning the War against rats"
2. https://allthatsinteresting.com/rat-king the rat kings as they get bigger become half dead, so maybe the rat king is like half deadish and moving weirdly because of it?

3. https://www.chicago.gov/city/en/depts/streets/provdrs/rodent/svcs/rodent_baiting.html
   "Remember if rats can't feed, they can't breed!" something interesting to use in one of the rambles.

Membership process: The page will be requesting name, email, occupation, and a really long vauge terms and conditions all related to rats and such.


Media: I'm planning on taking photos of the subway, most likely one of the underground stations on the red line. and also making audio of the rat king since I don't think he wouldve been able to get a good picture of the rat king.
